

CITY AFFAIRS.

GALLIPOLIS, SEPTEMBER 28, 1865.

Read the "Nasby paper" on our fourth page, on the nomination of soldiers by the Democracy. It is an apt illustration of things "right in town."

An article on our first page from the New York World, relating to the tax on Government Bonds, merits attentive perusal. The World used to be good authority with our neighbors of the Dispatch. We should be pleased to see the article alluded to, published in their columns. It is in much better taste, than their whining on "equality of taxation."

A large number of Journals have been ordered by various persons for distribution through the county. They are therefore free to those to whom they are sent, and it is to be hoped they will not be without good results. We urge our friends in the several townships to distribute the documents and let the people have light. Nothing is now required but to unmask the Confederate Democracy, and show its complicity with treason.

W. W. Gibson of Gallia Co., is the Agent for Sherman and his Campaigns, in Sutton and Salem townships, Meigs county Ohio. Mr. Gibson is a sound loyal man, and worthy of patronage, by those desiring his book.

In the march of Progress Gallipolis keeps her place in the front rank—as any one will perceive by calling on our friend Wm. Ridenour, who has just arrived with a splendid stock of Boots Shoes, &c., for the special benefit of the whole sale and retail trade in this vicinity. Mr. Ridenour has opened temporarily in the lower room of Leopold Frank's building, corner of Court, and Second Street, while his large room in Aleshire's new building is being fitted up. Call and see him.

Look over our young friend J. C. Shepard's advertisement. Ladies will find there every article, they require, and they will find by a personal visit to his rooms, that the Goods are as represented and that, Mr. Shepard knows "how to keep a" Store.

Read what Mr. John Dages says in his advertisement in this issue, and act accordingly. His New Stock will show for itself.

The second Union gun of the campaign comes booming along with an increased majority for the patriot's cause. Official returns from 264 towns in Maine, being over three-fourths of the State, give 18,640 Union majority, against 14,667 last year—a gain of near 4,000. The Union majority in the State will exceed 20,000. Good enough.

The Hon. John B. Haskin, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions of the late New York Democratic Convention and the author of the Democratic platform, writes a letter to the Herald, giving an inside view of the doings of that body. He says:

The Committee on Platform are entitled to credit for amending the resolutions submitted and for cropping out of them those which were unnecessary for making the platform symmetrical, comprehensive and strong, and for the late resolution, frankly and honestly endorsing President Johnson. I know that some of our "leaders," so called, desired a simple endorsement of him, "to divide and conquer the enemy; but with me the paramount idea—and it induced me to go to the Convention, in view of the course of the Chicago platform—was to avoid the Bourbon Vandalism of the Ohio, the Jerry Black Buchananism of the Pennsylvania, the Camden and Amboy Rip Van Winkleism of the New Jersey Democratic platform, and to give President Johnson a sincere and hearty endorsement, to make him the great leader of people and of the Democratic party, as his great prototype, Andrew Jackson, was of old. My association with and knowledge of President Johnson during the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth session of Congress gave me opportunity to know that he was, as a Democrat, conservative; as a statesman, able; and as true a Union patriot as lives.

LISTEN TO AN OLD DEMOCRAT.

The patriotism of a true Democrat is as refreshing as the treason of the peace sneaks who now style themselves Democrats, is disgusting. Gen. John A. Logan is a Democrat of the old school—the time when Democracy meant something. In a speech at Jacksonville, Illinois, on the 20th ult., he advised his hearers that he believed everything that was done by the Government for the putting down of the rebellion, whether according to the strict letter of the Constitution and laws or not, was right and he fully endorsed it.

as did the brave and intelligent soldiers whom he had the honor to command. He was opposed to the restoration of the rights of citizenship, much less the re-admission of their States, to the men whose skirts had hardly been cleansed of the defilement of treason, and whose fingers were yet dripping with the blood of the martyrs of the Union. He admonished particularly all those who had borne arms against the rebellion, to remember the many mounds scattered over the Southern country, which contained the ashes of their slain and martyred comrades and conjured them by the memories of the dead to be faithful to the Union, and to that portion of the people who had sympathized and sustained them in their efforts against treason, and discord; despise and abhor any overture from any man or party who had either been a peace man or sympathizer with the South, during the continuance of the rebellion.

Let soldiers give heed to the words of this great chieftain.
